Tampa Bay Reporter: 40th Avenue Bridge Re-Opens to Two-Way Traffic

After days of utility re-location and rerouting of traffic lanes, the 40th Avenue NE Bridge will be open for two-way traffic starting at 10 a.m. today (Aug. 23).

One lane of eastbound and one lane of westbound traffic will be shifted to the outer edges of the bridge, so that engineers can more closely inspect the interior and center pieces of the span.

The Weekly Challenger: Rededicating the Woodson Museum

City officials and community visionaries gathered to rededicate the Dr. Carter G. Woodson African American History Museum last Sunday, Aug. 20. The three-year battle to save the museum is over.

Located in Jordan Park, the process for the City of St. Petersburg to purchase the building the museum is housed in and the adjacent Legacy Garden from the St. Petersburg Housing Authority (SPHA) was authorized and approved by city council more than two years ago and completed this May.

Tampa Bay Times: St. Petersburg officials meet with charity about mayors challenge

Mayor Rick Kriseman, council member Karl Nurse, and the city staff met with a Bloomberg Philanthropies consultant on Tuesday to develop ways to think outside the box on a growing problem in the Sunshine City: the lack of affordable housing.

The workshop at City Hall was the first step in the charity's mayors challenge, an initiative designed to encourage creative solutions to urban problems. Up to 35 cities will receive as much as $100,000 to test "a bold idea."

I Love the Burg: Open Streets Connects EDGE and Grand Central Districts

A bike-friendly Burg is on the horizon. Coast Bike Share's utter ubiquity throughout Tampa Bay has further activated the local cyclist community. Initiatives have been put into place to help make the streets downtown around the Shine City safer for those commuting by foot and two-wheels.

Open Streets St. Pete is a group of local residents looking to make St. Pete healthy, fun and safe. The goal is to provide public access to St Pete streets and roadways for active transportation, exploration and fun.

Tampa Bay Business Journal: More work in store for small businesses in St. Pete

St. Petersburg is upping its commitment to hiring small businesses for city work after St. Pete City Council voted 7-1 to increase requirements on how much business stays local.

The ordinance approved Thursday will raise the city's Small Business Enterprise goal from its existing 5 percent benchmark to 11 percent next fiscal year. That goal will rise to 13 percent in 2019 and 15 percent in 2020.
